SECRET

November 1, 1962 - Thursday

Virginia and Ambrose Chambers arrived this morning, to stay. I went over to see Dr. Eric Williams, Prime Minister of Trinidad and Tobago, and Ambassador Clark, Trinidad-Tobago Ambassador to the United States, at the Westbury Hotel, where they have their delegation headquarters.

The High Commissioner for Uganda, Mr. Timothy Bazarrabusa, made a courtesy call on me. He is 50 years old, and formerly served in the National Legislative Council. For 30 years he has been intensely interested in education. He said he had been in the United States for only two weeks on the US Teacher Exchange Program when he was notified of his appointment as High Commissioner to Great Britain.

I had a delightful lunch at Bucks with Lord Privy Seal Heath. I raised certain questions with him, bearing on the Common Market, and wrote to Bob Schaetzel as follows:
